Kent Jones referenced to comments on Cedar City Meeting:

First, to introduce myself. I have been in the water well drilling and pump work for over 50 years. My family have been in the industry in Utah, working since 1923 with a combined knowledge of well over 100 years. This being said I am disappointed the office of the state engineer is still thinking the world is flat or in other words we are working with bowls of water under the ground that we float on. I would hope you would reconsider this thinking and cease the water take. Now is the time to do a true water study to find the truths. That is designed to not only allow the people to use the water but to protect our water resource from waste. I hold a lot of knowledge of the water underground in Utah and surrounding areas. From what I have seen there is plenty for all if used wisely. I am also a water user and hope to continue to be a wise one, not in a panic. We are headed off the edge of a flat earth in this dry time.

Thank you

Richard Petersen
